

Lessons learned in ministry beyond the book. After serving in full time youth ministry for almost 25 years I am now looking back over the ups, downs, good, bad, pleasant, hurtful, fun, not so fun, meaningful, forgetful, lessons learned and lessons taught and come to a conclusion "I wish I would have learned some of these things in Bible College instead of facing them on my own. I wish someone would have walked me through these moments. So, I am venturing into the realm of writing this book so others starting out in ministry, stepping into the great calling of God in their lives can have a resource to refer to when life hits them with issues and situations that education can not prepare them for in life. I loved my time at Bible College, the professors and lessons I learned at Valley Forge Christian College made a great impact on my life. I fully believe that every professional minister of the Gospel, in whatever capacity/calling in a church leadership position should be thoroughly equipped, rightly dividing the Spirit of truth, as Paul urges Timothy. I in no way want to discount a Theological education, but I know that there are a lot of lessons that a class will never teach. My goal for this book is to provide others with insight from my mistakes, life lessons, errors, issues, etc. that I faced in full time ministry so others can learn from my mistakes and lessons before they learn the "oh hard" way by making similar ones themselves. I do not claim to have all the answers, just life lessons that I pray will benefit others starting out in ministry to get a solid start and make an incredible impact. Like Paul says, I bring my body and life into discipline so that when I have preached I do not disqualify myself. I pray that this endeavor will assist others to stay in the race and fight the good fight and finish the purpose God called them to pursue. The chapters in this book are broken down into various seasons of my ministry "career" as I walked through various stages, church situations, and crisis issues (both thrown at me by others and brought on by myself)
