

A book for managers, team leaders, and others to mentor and inspire greatness in those around them. The goal of this book is to provide information on how to properly lead others and encourage their success. While short, this book seamlessly outlines what successful leaders do to inspire greatness. In beginning of the book we analyze a project manager, who got results, but in the wrong way. Leaders must value their team, look at the big picture rather than chasing positions, give credit, and also retain talented people. Then we look at a real life example. We explore Steve Job's™ early years at Apple, mistakes he made, and relate that back to the lessons we learned from the previous chapter. In the following chapters, we outline what we as leaders need to do every day to inspire greatness in our staff and the ingredients it takes to build a leader. There are several key habits that leaders have and we discuss each of them, with how to properly carry them out. Whether you're™ a manager, educator, or community leader, we must try our best to every day find and facilitate greatness and every person that we encounter. Go out and inspire greatness in someone today!
